

Job Site Inspections

Job Site Inspections

Scope of Service:

Safety training is often looked at as a necessary evil. There has always seemed to be an attitude in the industry of "get through the training, and then get back to the field and it is business as usual". Adding the element of job site inspections to your training program helps to take classroom knowledge and apply it to the actual field work. When people sit in a classroom environment for long periods of time, no matter how interesting the trainer, we are susceptible to not retaining all the information. By having us go out and perform site inspections for you, we can ensure that what has been taught is actually what is being practiced. We will be happy to meet with your team in the field showing them areas of risks, compliance concerns, and point out what they are doing right. Job site inspections are not only a way to provide your team with the knowledge needed in order to prevent or treat injury, but could also provide you with the information that you may need in order to meet your OSHA compliance requirements.

With regard to "scope of service", that will be determined after meeting with our customers, and will be designed to their specific needs.

Objective:

Our objective in offering this service is to provide our customers with an additional means of being able to take all of the safety information that we have learned over the years, and ensure that it is being applied to work practices. It also allows us to reinforce safety and compliance with your team, and assess the potential risks for injuries for fines on a particular site. The more your employees are encouraged to practice safe behavior in the field, the more likely it is that they will develop and maintain safe job sites over time.